AUTUMN CRUISE SHIP SEASON IN FULL SWING

THIS WAS THE VIEW FROM THE BEACON on Sunday evening, September 22, as the sun set at about 7:45pm. The ship is the Norwegian Dawn which had spent the day in Corner Brook and had just left the Bay of Islands en route to Sydney, NS. The ship has a gross tonnage of 92,250, length of 965 feet, beam of 105 feet, draft of 28 feet, cruise speed of 22.5 knots, accommodation for 2,224 passengers and a crew of 1,073. Available on board are numerous different forms of entertainment including bars, lounges, fitness centre, spa, swimming pools, a casino, theatre, and several excellent dining rooms.

The vessel offers a variety of cruises with different ports of call, but this particular cruise began in Quebec City with its first call at Corner Brook; then on to Sydney and Halifax, NS; Saint John, NB; Bar Harbour, Maine; and ending at Boston, Mass, seven days later. Coach tours to places of interest like Lark Harbour are available at the various ports of call. Prices for this trip begin at almost C$700 per person, and do not include cost of the onshore port excursions.

The passengers appear to enjoy their cruises, but judging by what we as outside observers can see, the onshore excursions are rather hurried, with only a few minutes at each location. The type of entertainments might not suit all of us, but reports indicate that the food served on the ships is good. However, when they visit our church hall, very few passengers fail to take eager advantage of the ACW Ladies’ home-made jams and baked goods!

CHURCH HALL REPAIRS AND RENOVATIONS

EVERYONE KNOWS that over last winter St James Church was faced with a difficult and messy problem when water leaked into the basement Hall, necessitating stripping of the walls and digging up the floors to put in new drains. The work is now finished and the Hall is returned to normal, but at an uninsured cost of about $35,000.

For two small communities with a total population of 857 (LH 510 & YH 347) in the 2011 Census, $35,000 is a lot to raise, averaging about $40 for each resident man, woman and child. Where do little towns like ours find that extra money? It isn’t easy.

Along with the two Town Halls and the School, the Church and its basement Hall are important social centres. They accommodate a number of different groups and activities, and we need them all.

Fortunately the Anglican Church Women’s Associations in both towns are very dedicated and active, and we have them to thank for the fact that the $35,000 is now paid off. There have been generous donations, including two from visitors who gave us $50 and $100, and also from many expatriates and through memorial gifts. Much appreciation must finally be accorded to the ACW ladies who devote many hours to earning money by providing refreshments for the cruise ship visitors.

Thanks to all for their untiring efforts on our behalf.
Terra Nova Nostalgia
“Come home to Newfoundland”
a poem by
Dr Charlie O’Connell, MD
formerly of Curling

Once there was a sunset on the Big Bay
Glorious and full of splendour,
Deep orange red with tinted clouds,
Sinking sunset beneath a horizon of spruce clad hills.
Beyond the “Isle of Innismara”
With crimson reflected waters of the Bay, calm and quiet,
Promising a beautiful new tomorrow.

Once there was a River
Rushing ebbs and steadies,
o’er rocky crags of shore,
Sheltered by verdant slopes of sylvan beauty
Wildly magnificent, white water challenge for the brave adventurer,
Past haunts of salmon, smugglers’ caves and island of buried treasure,
Gyrating whirlpools beneath the rock of “Pirate’s Eye”.

Once there was a Lake,
Skirted by soft white sands,
Island studded haven of youth’s exploits,
Thirst quenching retreat of moose and deer,
Swimming, and canoeing paradise of campsite beaches.

Once there was a Mountain, higher than Everest,
Snow capped even in summer,
Sheer rock faced nests of gull and puffin,
Rising from shoreline to embrace the clouds,
With summer trails and downhill powder ski runs.

Once there was a Boy
Who lived and laughed and loved the beauty of his playground kingdom,
Alpine mountaineer, explorer of islands, trout fisherman, lake swimmer.
All these he was and more. They were his heritage.
But then the boy grew up and went away.
He left the Bay, the River, Lake and Mountain
To seek new places, new adventures.
A big world awaited him out there beyond the Sunset on the Bay.

He travelled far and wide
To teeming cities reaching to the skies,
Pavement bound mazes of wonder,
Super ribbon highways, out into the sunset of the West
With great and limitless horizons.

From place to place he fled
But never rested,
For always, in pursuit,
The “Hound of Heaven” that is home.

Minutes of Meeting of 2013 September 17

Present:
Deputy Mayor Jamie Park
Councillors: Pauline Sheppard, Llewellyn Childs,
Stanley Childs
Clerks: Peggy Sheppard, Joanna Pottle (recording)

Meeting commenced at 7:00 pm.

- Minutes of meeting of 2013 August 20 adopted as circulated.
- Water/Sewer Update – Funding for Phase 2 has been declined due to limited program budget. A letter has been sent to Mr Kevin O’Brien requesting a review of this decision. Phase 1B estimated completion date is mid-October. Phase 1B status report #4 is now due to be paid. The municipal share for this report is $25,729.24. Of this amount $22,769.24 will be returned in the New Year once the HST return is received. At the end of the day, Council is responsible for $1,138.47. Motion made to pay amount of $25,729.24 by using the balance of the Gas Tax account of $15,785.45 and the remaining $9,943.79 from the general account. Once we receive our HST return the money will be replaced in the general account.
- Fracking – Brief discussion on a meeting that Councillors Stanley and Llewellyn attended at the Humber Valley Resort on September 12th. This was the Eighth International Symposium regarding oil and gas resources in Western Newfoundland. Review of an invitation from Simon Jansen to attend a presentation by Jessica Ernst regarding fracking. This is an invitation-only presentation and no one from Council is available to attend this meeting. There is also a public meeting on 2013 Sept 22, 2013 in Stephenville. PUBLIC MEETING TO DISCUSS FRACKING

FOR A WHILE NOW THERE HAVE BEEN PLANS FOR A MEETING IN LARK HARBOUR OF LOCAL RESIDENTS TO DISCUSS FRACKING AND OUR COMMUNITY’S BEST APPROACH TO IT. NO DATE HAS YET BEEN FIXED, BUT IT WILL TAKE PLACE AS SOON AS POSSIBLE AFTER 2013 OCTOBER 10.

This meeting is intended to enable community residents to express their concerns, whether for or against fracking, and for a variety of different ideas to be aired in discussion. It will not be yet another time for presentations by industry persons, as we have been exposed to that several times already. Instead it will provide a forum for open, frank and moderate discussion by residents and will convey our feelings to government as a community consensus. Eddie Joyce, our MHA, will attend, and other local elected officials will be welcome.

As soon as a firm date is established, the Meeting will be announced publicly.

Watch for announcements on posters, radio and social media.

FOOD BANK NOTES by Susan Harvey

A FEW ITEMS OF FOOD have appeared at the Church, and Don Travers has provisionally agreed to be responsible for transporting donated items to one of the outlets in Corner Brook. Rev Nelson Chatman is also prepared to assist with this. As yet no one has volunteered to be the official Food Bank representative. This individual is responsible for reminding the congregation of the need the Food Bank fills, and the importance of Sharing Our Blessings. There are meetings perhaps 3-4 times a year with the representatives from other churches in the Bay of Islands, and this helps us keep track of the situation.

For a brief general rundown on Fracking by The Council of Canadians (it’s about fracking for natural gas, but very similar considerations apply as for oil) go to:

9. The Gale of 1929  Gary Collins
11. Landslide: The Jack Hickey Story  Bruce Stagg

1. Good as Dead is a rather long account of a hostage-taking in the UK. It is quite suspenseful; we do assume that things will turn out more or less all right in the end, but plainly there are all kinds of ways things can go wrong. The hostage is a policewoman, taken hostage by a seemingly harmless little shopkeeper whose son has supposedly killed himself. His father is convinced that he has been murdered and will kill the hostage unless DI Tom Thorne will investigate and find the truth for all to see. Thorne must begin a complex investigation and convince Akhtar, the shopkeeper, that he has found the truth and can prove it—all the while knowing that Akhtar is unpredictable and may shoot the policewoman. A lot to be done quickly, and must be done right; which is not something Thorne is known for. Sometimes the rules are too much trouble. The reader will feel with Thorne’s situation and will not want to put the book down until the situation is resolved. A good long read.

2. The Drop is another story of Harry Bosch, now of an age where he may be forced to retire, though he is hoping that the Delayed Retirement Option Plan (DROP) will allow him to keep on working. He likes his work in the Open-Unsolved Unit (OU) where he and the rest of the department are regularly assigned to work old cases which were never solved, and perhaps may have a connection to some more recent crime. He is given a murder to work, in which a blood stain has been analysed using modern techniques. Unfortunately the blood stain would appear to indicate that a vicious murder was committed by a man who was eight years old at the time: not believable. Harry gets started and is progressing hopefully on the case, when he is given a further assignment in which a man has, in the present day, fallen from a hotel roof and been killed: did he jump or was he pushed? The man was the son of a councilman, so Harry is expected to get right on with it. This complicates his work on the cold case, but they must both be completed. The reader will sympathise, and will be pleased to note how neatly Harry works everything out. Another good read.

3. The Serpent’s Tale is a medieval mystery in which the murder victim is Rosamund the Fair, the mistress of King Henry II. Henry was obviously very taken with her, and has set her up in her own castle, guarded by a complex maze. The suspicion is that her murder has been arranged by Henry’s queen, Eleanor of Aquitaine. Eleanor is already inciting Henry’s sons to rebel against him, and there are prospects of war all over England. Henry has asked a woman to try to find out what has happened to Rosamund. He has great faith in the woman, Adelia, who is a medical doctor and very good at understanding people’s motivations. She was trained in Italy, and the English are suspicious of her; they are inclined to regard her as a witch—and witches are often burned at the stake. Adelia travels with a big Arab man, both for physical protection and to lull people’s suspicions; he is presented as the doctor and she is his assistant. The reader gets a real feel for the times and will also get very involved in the story. A good and different read.

4. Reflex is another of Mr Francis’s stories about life in the horse racing world, which he knows well because he was a part of it when he was a champion jockey. In this story the jockey, Philip Nore, becomes involved in some of the less attractive, even illegal, aspects of racing. He hears of strange events in the Jockey Club, the group which controls most of racing in the UK; and, at a more personal level, he is asked to lose a race he could have won - under a threat of losing his job if he doesn’t co-operate. Like most of the author’s characters, he is a good detective; and in this case he is an expert photographer, with access to some puzzling photographs taken by a professional photographer who has died. There is lots of information on general photographic techniques, plus some exotic methods of recovering useful pictures from apparently blank negatives. After a good bit of exciting action, including some attempts to murder various people involved in crime and even Philip himself, he discovers who is behind everything, and manages to stop him. Good easy reading, and even educational regarding photographic techniques.

5. The Postcard Killers is the story of an unusual pair of serial killers, who really seem to regard their activities as a game. The reader may be a little shocked by the light manner in which they approach their victims and then cold-bloodedly kill them and arrange the body “artistically”. They even send a postcard to someone to announce their crime; plainly they believe they are too smart to be caught. As there is no real motive for the killings, it is difficult to catch them; and the reader will be fascinated by the process which succeeds.

6. Fear the Worst is another story in which a child is threatened, and the parent must try to protect her. In this case, the child is a teenager called Sydney, Syd for short. Her father is a used car salesman, and he has no idea where his daughter has disappeared to. More frightening, as he searches for her, he realises that others are also looking for her, and some of them are rather scary. It develops into a kind of race to see who will find Syd first. In the end, with the help of his ex-wife and her husband (also a used car salesman) the father reaches her—at the same time as the other searchers. Some problems sorting everything out, but in the end all is well.

7. Don’t Blink is yet another action suspense story. The main character is Nick Daniels, a reporter for a national magazine. In trying to write a story about a baseball player, he witnesses a vicious killing. He finds himself involved with Mafia types, who apparently have decided to kill him also. A lot of action, which of course finishes with him sorting everything out in a happy ending.
8. The Centurion’s Wife is a historical novel of particular interest to the religious. The main part is set in the time between Jesus’ crucifixion and his resurrection. We learn about the lives of the main characters: the centurion, Alban; and Leah, a maid servant who is betrothed to Alban without her consent. Leah works in the household of Pontius Pilate, with his wife Procula. Both of them are asked to find out about a new prophet, called Jesus, and the group who follow his teachings. Pilate fears that this group could be a threat to the Roman Empire; and he is worried that he did order the crucifixion, under pressure from the Pharisees. Alban and Leah try to find out what happened to Jesus’ body, which is not in his tomb; and they are surprised and impressed by the followers of Jesus whom they meet. Naturally, they have trouble accepting the idea that Jesus came back from the dead, but are not able to prove that he didn’t. Already partly convinced, they are present for the events of Pentecost, which finally does convince them. A surprisingly good read.

9. The Gale of 1929 tells some of the stories from that terrible storm. Not realising that a very violent storm is about to break that night, several sailing ships leave St John’s harbour to sail for home further up the coast to the north. We are told of eleven schooners who had finished their business in St John’s and were loaded with goods for home. None of the ships made it home on their own, and six of them never did make it. Fortunately in each case, there was a rescue, and almost no lives were lost. The ships who did make it home were towed in by larger vessels. Surprisingly, one ship did actually arrive safe in port on the other side of the ocean, in England. Interesting stories about the individual ships, and also some description of the tsunami and the other events of that historic storm.

10. Newfoundland Drugstores is an authoritative history of drugstores in our province. If you ever wondered about old-fashioned remedies and the druggists who supplied them, Dr John K Crellin’s book can tell you about them. There are many illustrations mostly taken from newspapers of the time, and it is an excellent reference book. As you might expect, most of the businesses mentioned are in St John’s or the immediate area. It is only near the end, after confederation with Canada, that two west coast drugstores are mentioned: an order from Curling Rexall in 1966 and, in the 1980’s, George Hutchings and his Corner Brook Drug Mart. Mr Hutchings is commended for being among the first drugstore owners to refuse to sell tobacco products because they are harmful to the health. He also expanded his business to provide a more generalised form of patient care: a person could buy wheelchairs, walkers, canes, commodes, etc; and he also introduced computer records of patient history. A big change from the old pharmacist mixing his compounds in the back room.

11. Landslide is certainly the story of a tragic landslide in Harbour Breton; but even more it is the story of Jack Hickey before and during the landslide and particularly the lasting effects on his life afterward. It is well told, with input from Jack himself and from many others who also lived through the terrible events. Only Jack actually lost family members; four of his six children died in the destruction of their house. Again, a book that is easy to read and hard to put down.

Editorial: FRACKING UPDATE

THERE IS LITTLE FRESH NEWS to report at this time on the fracking issue as it applies to our Province, although there is one item that all of us with misgivings about the process need to be aware of:

According to a report of 2013 September 13 (Friday) by Canadian Press and presented by VOCM , Premier Kathy Dunderdale remarked recently that her government “has no plans to introduce specific rules to regulate hydraulic fracturing. The province already has a strict environmental assessment process that allows for scientific study and public input.”

The Premier also added that “there’s no guarantee that fracking will actually take place in the province.” That may or may not be correct, and in any case she presently holds the key to that issue. However if Black Spruce Exploration, Shoal Point Energy and other companies involved have their say (and be sure they are trying to) then the likelihood of it taking place may be imminent.

I believe it is a cause for concern that our Premier is so ill-informed about fracking as to believe that regulations currently governing conventional oil recovery activities in N&L are sufficient, when many people far better informed than ourselves have told us the process is so different that those regulations are not adequate.

There seems to be a general unwillingness by those who favour allowing companies to use hydraulic fracturing to accept the validity of any of the many reports that have appeared publicly in recent months from those areas of the world, including Canada, where the process is already in use. Numerous reports have recently been published citing pollution of water supplies, air pollution, minor earth tremors, etc, that it seems foolhardy of anyone to agree willingly to the use of the process in their neighbourhood.

It is of course possible that these negative reports are false, or at least mistaken and, as we have been assured both by leaders of the industry and now also apparently by our Premier, that fracking is harmless. But most of us are smart enough to know that if fracking goes ahead here, and negative health or environmental effects appear, then it will be too late to bring in new and more effective regulations: irreparable damage will be done. We also know from experience that, despite its protestations to the contrary, industry is invariably reluctant to accept any meaningful responsibility for the messes it has made.

NL-FAN, (www.nlfan.ca) recently established in Western Newfoundland and with a growing membership of organisations and individuals, has stated publicly its request to the Government of Newfoundland & Labrador as follows:

1. Conduct a scientific and public review of hydraulic fracturing in Newfoundland and Labrador in order to fully assess the potential health, environmental, economic, and social effects on the region as a whole;
2. Review the associated regulatory, policy, and legislative issues;
3. Recommend an approach that protects citizens and the environment, and fosters sustainable development.

The Government of Quebec, whose policies we certainly do not always agree with, is taking steps to institute a moratorium on fracking in parts of that Province. This will allow for closer investigation of their own situation and gathering of information from other administrations, enabling them to review the issue more thoroughly and arrive at appropriate decisions for Quebec.

The Government of Nova Scotia has also announced plans for an independent review to be led by a multi-disciplinary panel of experts.

If this review is good for Nova Scotia, wouldn’t a similar one be good for N&L? The findings of both this NS project and the Quebec one, as well as whatever may be available from anywhere else, such as other places in Canada, USA, and Europe, will be useful in helping our Province to make a satisfactory decision on fracking. But we must also have a serious detailed review of the potential impact on our own environment. Many environmental and geological factors are unique to our Province, and therefore we need as much knowledge about them as possible.

As many have said, the oil will not go anywhere if it is left in the ground a few more years, and the companies who are presently so impatient to get started are likely to find, if the result shows that fracking is indeed a safe process as they have consistently assured us, then they will be received much more positively by local residents. It is also likely that oil will become even more valuable as the years pass, and those who still have some in the ground will be able to benefit.

Is there any good reason why Newfoundland & Labrador should not take similar steps to safeguard our precious environment and health as those proposed by our sister provinces?

If you are concerned about the issue of hydraulic fracturing and you are not yet a member of NL-FAN, or if you simply wish to have more information, visit the organisation’s Home Page at www.nlfan.ca and review some of the documentation listed there. Then, if you believe as many of us do, that more time and thought is needed before we allow the use of fracking in or near our communities, add your name to the membership list.
